DETAILED ACTION

Election/Restrictions

1. This application contains claims 1-5 drawn to an invention nonelected with traverse in Paper No. 6. A complete reply to the final rejection must include cancelation of nonelected claims or other appropriate action (37 CFR 1.144) See MPEP § 821.01.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

- 2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:
  - (a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.
- 3. Claims 6, 9, and 13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Crain [Pat. No. 1,632,176] in view of Pfleiderer et al [Pat. No. 505,175] and Wrasse [Pat. No. 5,176,124].

Crain teaches an apparatus comprising a chain, forge conveyor which horizontally transports a pile of burning charcoal from a leading end to a trailing exhaust end (Figure 1, #27-28) and a cooking chamber above the forge conveyor (Figure 1, #10). Crain does not teach a temperature sensor, food conveyor, and a variable output air blower. Pfleiderer et al teach an apparatus comprising a chain, food conveyor (Figure 1, t-T). Wrasse teaches an apparatus comprising an air blower (Figure 1, #21), a damper plate (Figure 1, #16), and a temperature sensor (Figure 1, #25). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to incorporate the ingredients conveyor of Pfleiderer et al into the invention of Crain since both are directed to cooking devices, since Crain already included a cooking chamber (Figure 1, 10), and since Pfleiderer et al teaches that the ingredients conveyor allowed the food to be removed without having to reach into the oven (page 1, lines 10-16) and thus reduced the risk of burning the operator. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to incorporate the temperature sensor, blower, and damper of Wrasse into the invention of Crain since both are directed to cooking devices, since Crain already included a charcoal heat source which required a steady supply of air (page 1, lines 4 & 69), since the blower of Wrasse provided a steady amount of air to provide complete combustion (abstract), since charcoal grills commonly included temperature sensors, such as the thermometer of Wrasse (Figure 1, 25), in order to monitor the cooking process and prevent burning, and since the damper of Wrasse would have provided a means to regulate the amount of air flow from the blower based upon the detected temperature within the device and thus better control the cooking process (column 4, lines 21-29).

4. Claims 7-8 and 10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Crain, in view of Pfleiderer et al and Wrasse, as applied above, and further in view of Nalbach [Pat. No. 2,390,455].

Crain, Pfleiderer et al, and Wrasse teach the above mentioned components. Crain, Pfleiderer et al, and Wrasse do not teach a mesh (or net) conveyor. Nalbach teaches an apparatus comprising a mesh (or net) conveyor (Figure 4, 20). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to incorporate the mesh (or net) conveyor of Nalbach into the invention of Crain, in view of Pfleiderer et al and Wrasse, since all are directed to cooking devices, since Crain included spaced food supports which permitted air to flow around the food (page 1, lines 77-94), since Pfleiderer et al already included a food ingredients conveyor (Figure 1, t-T), and since mesh conveyors were commonly used in cooking devices as shown by Nalbach.

5. Claim 11 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Crain, in view of Pfleiderer et al and Wrasse, as applied above, and further in view of Harris [Pat. No. 3,897,722].

Crain, Pfleiderer et al, and Wrasse teach the above mentioned components. Crain, Pfleiderer et al, and Wrasse do not teach a sauce applying means. Harris teaches a cooking device comprising a brush for applying sauce (Figure 1, 25). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to incorporate the brush of Harris into the invention of Crain since both are directed to charcoal cooking devices, since Crain was intended to be used for cooking meat (page 1, line 2), and since barbeque sauce was commonly applied to grilled meat as taught by Harris (column 1, lines 5-28).

Response to Arguments

6. Applicant's arguments filed May 20, 2003 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

In response to applicant's argument that the references fail to show certain features of applicant's invention, it is noted that the features upon which applicant relies (i.e., contact of the flames with the food) are not recited in the rejected claim(s).

Although the claims are interpreted in light of the specification, limitations from the specification are not read into the claims. See In re Van Geuns, 988 F.2d 1181, 26 USPQ2d 1057 (Fed. Cir. 1993).

Applicant argues that Wrasse does not disclose a temperature sensor within the oven and the blower being controlled via the temperature sensor. However, Wrasse clearly teaches a temperature sensor inside the oven chamber (Figure 2, #25; column 3, line 56) as well as controlling the blower output by observing the temperature sensor and adjusting the blower damper in order to raise or lower the oven temperature (column 4, lines 21-29).

Conclusion

7. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
